Structural vs. Cyclical Unemployment The root cause of structural unemployment is the skills mismatch. The economy as a whole is functional. This means that there are still more jobs in the economy than there are people to do the jobs. However, in some areas of the economy, there is abundant labor and no jobs whereas in other areas there are plenty of jobs and fewer laborers. Structural Unemployment - Definition, Causes and Cure The first cause of structural unemployment is technological development, which often makes jobs obsolete, thereby increasing rates of unemployment. It also means that companies have to hire fewer employees across the board; they achieve higher levels of productivity at lower costs when they fire human workers in favor of applying new technologies. Structural Unemployment | Intelligent Economist The graph also shows higher structural unemployment in the Eurozone. Even during times of growth, the average unemployment rate is higher. This structural unemployment has been attributed to factors, such as labour market immobilities and excessive labour market regulation. Causes of unemployment - Economics Help Causes of Structural Unemployment From Individual Perspective 1) When an individual is unable to upskill himself This is a very common issue of structural unemployment which workers face multiple times in their entire work life. Structural Unemployment - Definition, Meaning and Causes Causes of unemployment Unemployment is caused by various reasons that come from both the demand side, or employer, and the supply side, or the worker. From the demand side, it may be caused by high interest rates, global recession, and financial crisis. From the supply side, frictional unemployment and structural employment play a great role. Unemployment - Definition, Types, and Causes of Unemployment Structural unemployment is a form of involuntary unemployment caused by a mismatch between the skills that workers in the economy can offer, and the skills demanded of workers by employers (also known as the skills gap). Structural unemployment is often brought about by technological changes that make the job skills of many workers obsolete. Structural unemployment - Wikipedia Structural unemployment is attributed to a less qualified workforce. Frictional unemployment is due to voluntary unemployment when looking for a different job. Seasonal unemployment occurs when seasonal workers are unemployed and classical unemployment is when wages are too high, and companies cannot afford to pay them. Cyclical Unemployment: Definition, Causes, Effects Structural unemployment: This is a form of unemployment which is caused by the mismatch in the skills that workers in the economy can offer and the skills needed of workers by employers.
