Writing is a fundamental part of our daily lives. From writing emails to preparing job applications, writing filters into our working lives and is essential in every exam and school assessment. Though seemingly 'natural', writing proves devilishly difficult for far too many school pupils and this can have a lasting impact on their academic and life success. To close this gap, we need to ensure that every teacher has the knowledge and skill to teach writing with confidence. In Closing the Writing Gap, Alex Quigley makes sense of the history and 'science' of writing, synthesising the debates and presenting a wealth of useable evidence about how children develop most efficiently as successful writers. Offering practical strategies for teachers at every stage of their teaching career, the book helps teachers to be an expert in how pupils learn to write, from the big picture of planning, editing and revising your writing, to the vital importance of grammar and spelling with accuracy. This essential book presents the case for teacher-led efforts to develop pupils' writing and provides practical solutions for teachers across the curriculum, incorporating easy-to-use tools, resources, and classroom activities.

This monograph deals with variable tag questions. These are utterances with a variable interrogative tag, like It's peculiar writing, isn't it, and the semi-variable tag innit, such as Nice, innit. The aim is to provide a corpus-based, comprehensive semantic-pragmatic typology of British English tag questions. Compared to existing descriptions, the proposed typology is novel in three ways. Firstly, whereas almost all existing typologies are single-layered classifications, the functions of tag questions are categorized into two parallel dimensions of interpersonal meaning: the speech function and the stance layer. Secondly, semantic generalizations are proposed for clusters of grammatical, intonational and conversational properties. Thirdly, the bottom-up description is based on a sizeable amount of authentic, spontaneous conversations, which are analysed both qualitatively and quantitatively.
